German Patent DE 41 18 104 A 1 discloses a mechanical and pneumatic system for distance-detection, locking and drilling-cycle control of a pneumatic drill-feed unit, with a compressed-air motor feeding forward the screwed spindle accommodating the drill bit. Drill feed mechanism (11) is inserted in a bush with the air supply shut off, this being opened up when the codings of the two agree, while a bayonet coupling is pneumatically locked. The drilling cycle is initiated, the drill head being moved forward by a quick-traverse mechanism into the starting postion. It them performs drilling, reaming and countersinking geed movements are far as a pre-set end position, followed by automatic quick-traverse rearwards into the rest position, after which the motor is turned off, the feed mechanism is pneumatically unlocked and removed from the bush into the rest position.

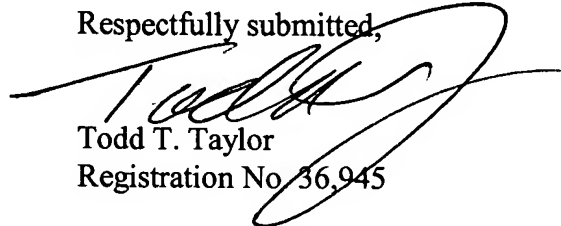

German Patent DE 41 25 501 A 1 discloses a holder for the feed unit consisting of a locking sleeve (5) with locating lugs (35) for bayonet location in a bush (4) through a template (58), a clamping device (24) and a distance bush (6). Coding is done by matching the sleeve (5) and bush (4) diameters and the number and position of slots (61). Pneumatic connections are arranged to suit
